INDUSTRY OVERVIEW

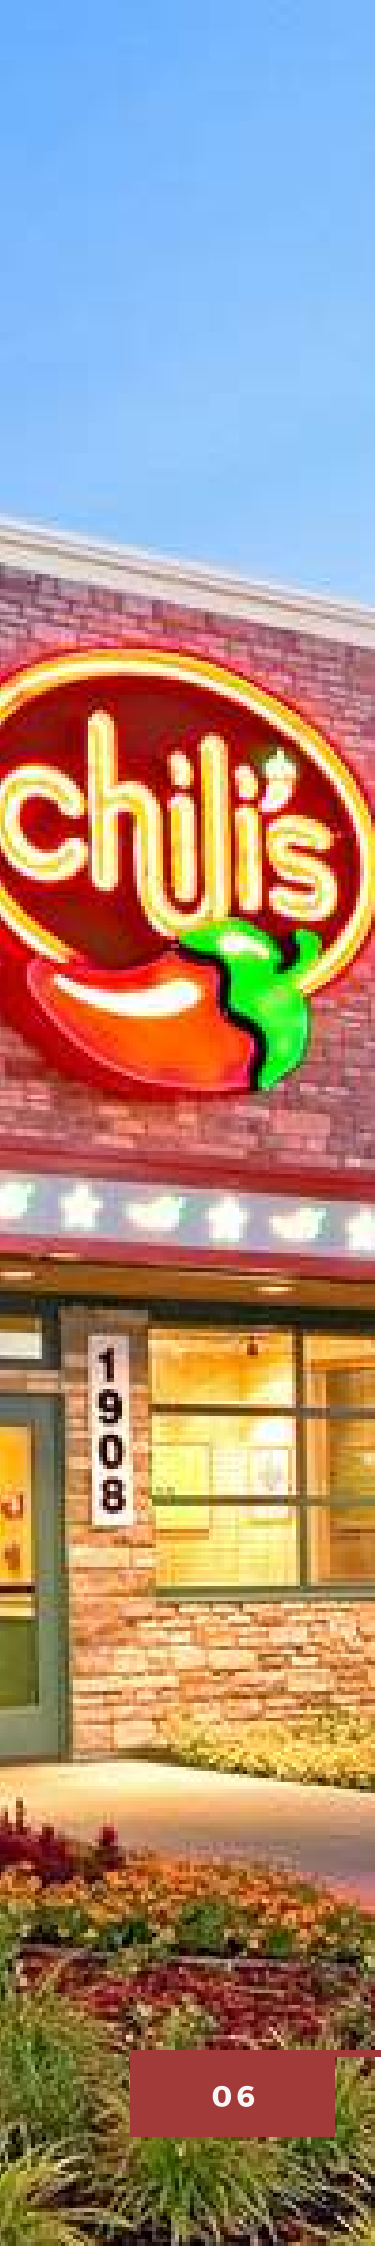

ABOUT THE INDUSTRY

Chili's Grill & Bar first opened its doors in Dallas, Texas in 1975. Since then the restaurant has extended their reach to over 32 countries. Owned and operated worldwide by Brinker International, the company prides its restaurants as a social and family friendly environment serving tex-mex food to customers globally. (Hoover, Brinker International, Inc., 2018)

Other competitors in the family-centric casual dining industry also include TGI Friday's, Ruby Tuesday, and Chuy's. Generating revenue of almost $290 billion annually, the United States full-service restaurants alone span over 290,000 individual establishments. Restaurants of this casual category are described as sit down restaurants where those seated are served and asked to pay at the end of the meal. Casual restaurants globally earn a revenue approaching $3 trillion yearly. (Hoover, Casual Restaurants, Inc., 2018)

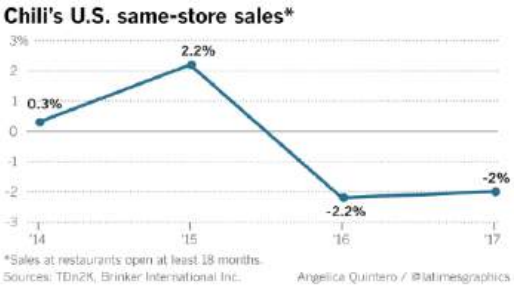

The main factor the casual restaurant industry provides above all else is convenience, variety, and price. Leaders in the category must compete in these categories to maintain and grow their market share. Consumer access to these qualities may differ based on their own personal income, taste, and demographic. Due to these attributes, there is an opportunity for growth in this industry if these companies use their resources on adopting new services and technologies. (Hoover, Casual Restaurants, Inc., 2018)

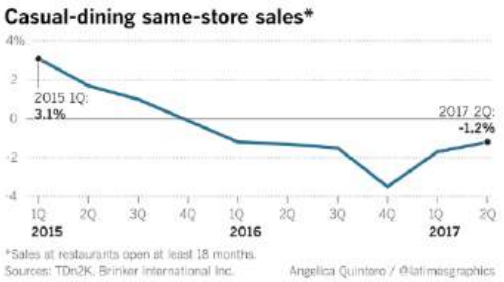

INDUSTRY ANALYSIS

TRENDS & EXPECTED GROWTH

Currently, Chili's is facing a decrease in customers along with other casual-dining restaurants due to the growing trend of fast casual restaurants.The growth of casual-dining has been on a decline over the years as more customers consider inexpensive fast-food chains. A vast majority of growth in the industry is in "fast casual" outlets such as Chipotle Mexican Grill Inc. and Panera Bread Co., takeout and delivery services, and independent restaurants — both mid-priced and upscale — that deliver a higher perceived value, analysts said. (Los Angeles Times, 2017)

Similar to the shift from in-store to online shopping, customers are frequently using apps such as Uber Eats to order food for takeout or delivery rather than sitting for a meal at a casual-dining restaurant.

> "In this age of social media, where photos of restaurant dishes are often popular material for Facebook or Instagram posts, the casual-dining chains may not make the cut."

(Los Angeles Times, 2017)

INDUSTRY ANALYSIS

TARGET MARKET

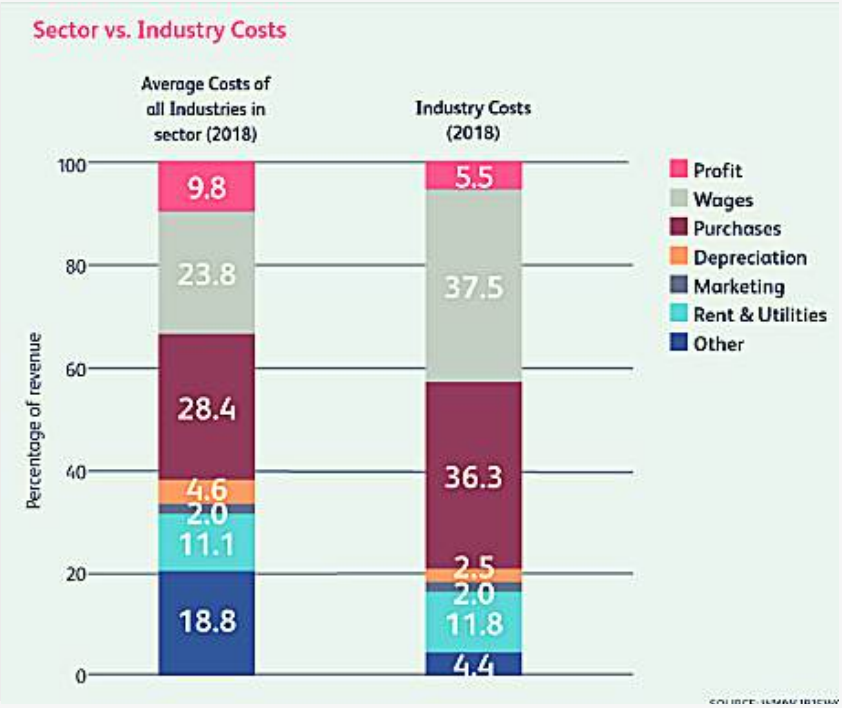

Chili's restaurant bar and grill has always been a popular restaurant chain and is a frequent place families and young adults go to. Since they have such a diverse menu with quality food at an affordable cost their target market is generally millenials and people from 18-34. Chilis hired a new marketing boss who stated that millennials were looking for "quick, cheap and customizable" places to spend their money not at a basic chain restaurant you can find anywhere. This new boss is placing emphasis on changing the menu to more customizable items so that their target market, millennials, will find it more appealing to eat at and it will fit their needs.

PROBLEMS

While Chili's is a popular staple in American dining, the franchise is facing a fair amount of problems. Their issues include mediocre food, terrible service, high labor costs, and fierce competition in both volume and variety. Chili's is becoming unfavorable because they are providing a customer experience that is no longer interesting or unique (Henage, 2013). Lastly, the entire sector of mid-priced, casual dining U.S. restaurant chains is struggling to compete with "fast casual" establishments (Peltz, 2017).

ADVERTISING

Advertising and other marketing cost make up 2% of the industry cost in the chain casual restaurant market. Major players in this industry maintain a majority stronghold on all advertising cost expended. Due to the barrier of entry, smaller restaurants that are not franchised find difficulty competing in terms of advertising budget. (IBISWorld, 2018)

CLIENT BACKGROUND

HISTORY OF CHILI'S

Chili's Grill & Bar first opened its doors in Dallas, Texas in 1975. Since then the restaurant has extended their reach to over 32 countries. Owned and operated worldwide by Brinker International, the company prides its restaurants as a social and family friendly environment serving tex-mex food to customers globally. (Hoover, Brinker International, Inc., 2018)

Set on the path of becoming one of today's market leaders, Norman Brinker of Brinker International Restaurants acquired the 23 former Chili's restaurant locations in 1980. Years later guiding the company on the road to becoming publicly traded as EAT on the New York Stock Exchange (NYSE) and creating a revolution in the advertising space with campaigns set forth by the company's famous fajitas and baby back ribs. (Brinker International Inc., 2018)

Today, Brinker International is owner to the second largest casual dining giant in the United States rivaling only Applebee's restaurants. Chili's Grill & Bar southwestern-style dish selection can be found at over 1,660 locations worldwide in over 32 countries. (Hoovers, Brinker International, 2018)

PRICE RANGE

$3.19 - $19.29

DISTRIBUTION

Chili's is the largest American casual dining brand in the world with over 1,694 locations. Itt is recognized as leader of grill and bar dining everywhere it goes. The successful restaurant has planted roots in 49 states and Washington D.C., 2 U.S. territories, 31 countries, and it will soon be introduced to Panama, Chile, and Vietnam (Brinker International, 2018).

TARGET MARKET

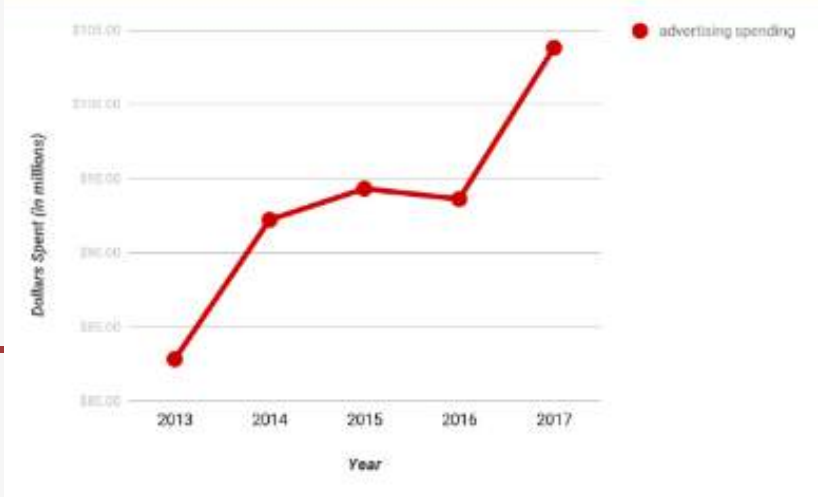

Because of the number of customers and range of ethnicities that visited every month, Chili's used to operate without defining a specific target market. Due to the decline in sales over recent years, the company is now working to be more precise in defining the target market. This segment consists of generation X and young millennial families desiring quality food, a good value and a service experience that allows them to connect with family and friends (Brinker International, 2018).

POSITIONING

Chili's is the number 1 American casual dining brand across the world, but the chain is repositioning itself to counter the slow-down in casual dining. By reducing items on the menu by 40%, management is aiming to make their food higher-quality and differentiable from competitors. Chili's has also begun offering more convenient options, including a to-go menu available on-line, over the phone, or through their app. Technology has also been crucial in the turnaround strategy; utilizing innovations such as Ziosk's for payment. Lastly, Chili's aims to better utilize media outlets to obtain a more modern, youthful feel to match its new target market (Brinker International, 2018).

AD SPENDING

In 2017, Chili's expenses went up by 1.2%, mainly as a result of their dramatic increase in advertising and marketing expenses. Advertising spending increased from $93.6 million in 2016, to $103.8 million in 2017. This past fiscal year, Chili's launched their new advertising campaign to draw in new customers through menu innovation, TV, and digital advertising. The new advertisements aim to tell the world "Chili's is back (baby back baby back)! With a uniquely Chili's style that is both reminiscent and upbeat, Chili's is on its way to strengthening its brand image and increasing traffic in an attempt to drive sales growth (Brinker International, 2018).

RECENT MARKETING EFFORT

I WANT MY BABY BACK, BABY BACK RIBS

Since Chili's is a popular chain restaurant with a variety of food, it can get lost in the jumble of chain restaurants that are similar. As the new chief marketing and innovation officer of Brinker International, Steve Provosts had this realization. He said, "Like the rest of casual dining, we're up against the wall right now and we need to reverse trends." (Wohl, 2017) This is what sparked Chili's most recent ad campaign.

Chili's most recent advertising campaign was put in place to increase their sales, which had fallen 2 percent in one year. They cut 40 percent of their items off their menu and narrowed their menu down to more specialized items like burgers, ribs and fajitas while adding 48 percent more meat to them. (Wohl, 2017) This advertising campaign highlighted the restaurants baby back ribs with a catchy jingle that states at the end, "Chili's is back, baby back, baby back." This jingle also reminds customers that Chili's doesn't only have ribs to offer that they have so much more. (Faw, 2017) To grab customers attention and get them to come into Chili's after the change, they increased their ads on TV and will have ads running on a variety of online websites. They also promoted a discount on their most popular burger, the Oldtimer with cheese, to 6.99 to get customers to come in and see their new changes.

They also plan to keep the prices a little more affordable throughout 2018 to see how this affects their sales. But the main thing that drew people in was the extremely catch jingle they incorporated in all their commercials and advertisements. Steve Provost said, "We admit that as a brand, we lost our way a bit and needed to take a step back to successfully move forward -- which for us, included going back to our roots and revisiting our iconic jingle that was once on everyone's lips." (Faw, 2017) This jingle goes all the way back to Chili's ads in 1986 and is also referenced in an Austin Powers movie and in an episode of the Office. This was something memorable that consumers couldn't get out of their head and gave them a nostalgic feel about the restaurant.

Current strengths The CATTO Agency has identified in Chili's Bar & Grill include their use of technology through Ziosks, food and drink specials, friendly service and laid-back restaurant vibe, relatively cheap drink menu, and variety of food which allows for a variety of customers. Current weaknesses we've identifies include possible technical difficulties with the Ziosk (as experienced through our ethnographic research), too many menu options for customers, a lack of stand-out dishes, and confusion of the type of food they serve (is it Tex-Mex or American?). Opportunities we've identified include the incorporation of more menu specials and a specialization in a certain food that will stand out and bring in customers. Threats that we've identified include similar restaurants with less expensive drinks, meal deals, or differentiated menus.

ETHNOGRAPHIC RESEARCH FORM

Section #: 501 Team #: 1 Date & Time of visit: 9/18/18, 8:30pm
Team member names: Tarah Cochran, Taryn Sobey, Christian Sanchez, Ariana Straughan, Olivia Rigby Restaurant name & location: Chili's on Texas Ave.

Experience and Observations

- Variety of soft music playing
- Lights were dimmed
- It took approximately 10 minutes to be waited on
- Applebee's commercial played on TV
- Not many people, there were 6 other booths taken
- All the tables except for one were college students
- Bar was nearly full with 2 open seats
- Middle aged, professionals
- Friendly, helpful waiter
- Large menu, variety of food
- Decent prices, not cheap, some items seemed expensive (i.e. $15 burger)
- Big portions of food, we all needed to-go boxes
- Sports were played on all TVs
- Lots of deals - 3 for $10, ribs, etc.
- Wait time for food was 15-20 minutes
- Very sectioned seating areas
- Pay tablet/machine was very convenient in splitting the check
- Had a small issue with an extra random item being added to the tab

5 Major Takeaways

- Large menu with a variety of food: somewhat difficult to choose because of the sheer amount of items but good because everyone can find something they like.
- Value: the portion sizes are large, food is good not fantastic, and the majority of the items (including a variety of "deals") are decently priced.
- Service: was okay, took 10 minutes to be waited on but afterwards was fast, helpful, efficient, friendly.

Customers: at 8:30pm there were significantly less people than at regular lunch/dinner times, the majority of customers were college students (eating) and middle aged adults at the bar area. The difference in type of customer (families, students, working professionals) is dependent upon time of day.
Atmosphere: dimly lit, music was at a medium volume, not much customer noise, casual setting, bar was similar to sports bar type feel, most tables were just 2 college students, or 2 middle aged adults, no more than 3 people.

ETHNOGRAPHIC RESEARCH NARRATIVE

The CATTO Agency entered Chili's on Texas Avenue around 8:30 pm on Tuesday, September 18th. In our hour spent at the restaurant we gathered key insights and takeaways from the food to the atmosphere.

We were greeted by the host who took us to our table on the left, far side of the restaurant. The layout was very segmented with low walls that hide other tables and booths. The atmosphere was casual, not fancy by any means, and the lights were dimmed. After 5-10 minutes of sitting we were asked if we had been helped, and said no. There might be a problem or miscommunication between hosts and servers that caused the delay. Our server was helpful, courteous, and quick.

The menu was large and almost overwhelming, which took us longer to look over and choose an entre. This was also good since each team member wanted different types of food. There were quite a few pictures in the menu and on the table which showed there deals like the 3 for $10, baby back ribs, and specialty burgers. Collectively, the spread of food that was ordered ranged from quesadillas to burgers along with margaritas.

Our team received the margaritas 5 minutes after ordering and the food around 15-20 minutes after ordering and everything came out right. For the price and large portions, the food was of great value. All team members took half of their food home, and everyone enjoyed their order.

Overall, the restaurant wasn't close to full, with only 6 other booths being full. The exception was that the bar at the center of the restaurant was packed with only 2 empty seats. The reason the restaurant wasn't full was due to the time our team was at Chili's (8:30 pm). During the day and around 6-7, from past experiences the restaurant is almost to capacity. There wasn't any major problems or surprises, but there was a slight issue with the payment machine at the table when an extra item was added. The server took care of it for us and we all left with a decent experience.

TARGET MARKET

CHARACTERISTICS OF DEMOGRAPHICS

Based on our survey results, Chili's target market demographic includes 18-24 year-old students, single, with no kids. The market is characterized by individuals interested in cheaper food. The target market is young and involved in social media.

HOW TO BEST REACH THE TARGET MARKET

From the survey we conducted, our target market demographics are 18-24 year-old, mostly female, college students. Our results showed that when asked what types of people go to the restaurant Chili's, what answers we most frequently got were "young people" or people "on a budget." To most effectively reach this target market, Chili's needs to keep having good deals like the "3 for $10" they have out now or the "2 for $20" because in our survey when asked to choose what is most important to them in a restaurant, most people chose "variety of food" and "cheap food." College students don't like spending a lot when they go to restaurants so if Chili's keeps those deals coming they will reach and satisfy a lot of their consumers. Another way for Chili's to effectively reach their target market would be to keep ads running on a lot of social media websites, especially Facebook. In our survey, most people responded with seeing the most ads for restaurants on Facebook and twitter was second. So, if they increase the advertisements on places like that and emphasizes their low prices, they will be directly reaching their consumers and will be advertising what they want, which is cheap food. These are two ways I believe will effectively increase Chili's sales by reaching their target market in a smart and effective way.

Meet Emily. Emily is a twenty-one year-old, Caucasian, communications major at Texas A&M University. She loves to socialize with friends and is in a women's organization which keeps her busy most nights of the week. She wants to be a journalist for a large news company when she graduates and tries her best to balance school with her social life. Her grades range from A's to C's but recently she's spending even more time studying to boost her grades, so she can start applying for internships. Her hobbies include going to sporting events, watching Netflix, going out to eat with her friends and playing with her 3 dogs. After a long study session at Evans library or an organization meeting, she and her friends like to go to Chili's for happy hour. Because she is a college student and her student job only pays minimum wage, she usually splits the Triple Dipper with her friends along with a few margaritas.

Meet Jose. Jose is a thirty year-old, Hispanic male, that is a young professional in the finance industry. He is a father of twin boys who married his college sweetheart and currently lives in College Station, Texas. He works at a local wealth management firm and is a huge family man. When he's not at work he is always with family and friends. Jose is working towards a promotion but as of now he is still entry level in the company. His wife is a teacher at the local high school, so he provides a majority of the income for the family. His has hopes of continuing with the finance industry to hopefully work his way into a major league sports team in their budgeting department. His schedule is from 9-5 or sometimes later if he has meetings to go to. His hobbies include watching sports, spending time with family, taking his kids to the movies, working on his motorcycle, and traveling.

Once a week his team goes to the bar at Chili's to watch the game and have a few drinks. Some nights of the week are especially busy for his family so he takes them out to Chili's for dinner. His kids love the ribs and chicken crispers, his wife loves the salad and lighter options, while Jose is a huge fan of the burgers. Because of the wide variety of food, he knows his kids will always like something and he can enjoy the sports playing on TV as well.

TARGET MARKET ANALYSIS

By conducting our primary research, we have begun to develop an understanding for the current opinions people hold of the Chili's chain. Our survey has also allowed us to better analyze who the chain's target market is following Chili's recent repositioning and their adjustments following a decline in customers. We discovered who our target market consisted of by first segmenting the surveyed population by their needs and wants. We found that potential customers may consider going to Chili's for the wide variety of options they offer. It is easy to see how this data reinforces our target market because 18-24 year old college students typically go to eat out in groups. This means that wherever they eat, they must be able to find something that appeals to each member going to the restaurant. When people who are a part of Chili's target market think of the food served, the first things that come to mind are traditional American food and/or Tex-Mex. The target market is most likely confused by what kind of chain Chili's is characterized as. We made this discovery because our interviewees either listed mainly American food or mainly Tex-Mex and maybe one or two selections from the other group.

Another discovery made through our research was how influential the image of a restaurant is on the target market. Many of our survey respondents mentioned a Vine or a quote from the hit show The Office. This correlates with out target markets use of social media as today's college students aged 18-24 were users of the Vine application on cell phones and comprise a large proportion of Netflix's customers where one is able to view The Office. Through our primary research, this discovery of how people hear of Chili's and what they think about when they hear the name illustrates how the chain has accidentally been differentiated from other casual dining establishments.

There was a trend in both our survey data and interview data which allowed us to uncover another reason college students eat a Chili's; there are cheaper options offered alongside the selections that are closer to mid-price. College students often find themselves living on a budget. When college students choose to eat at Chili's, they recognize that they will be able to get a cheap appetizer, a reasonably priced alcoholic beverage, or a wide selection of meals for less than 12 dollars. This selection allows 18-24 year olds to enjoy eating out without breaking their wallet.

Lastly, we found that our surveyed and interviewed groups viewed Chili's as less clean with low quality service. This relates to our target market, because the group consists of mainly of female customers. With a higher density of customers identifying as female comes a higher standard for customer service and the cleanliness of facilities. This primary research matches also with secondary research done previously. If Chili's was to improve upon these aspects, it would be reasonable to infer that customers image of the chain would improve dramatically and they would see it as less "cheap-o".

In conclusion, our data allowed us to make connections between the wants and needs of our target market and it enabled us to make new discoveries about the associations made by college students about the Chili's restaurant chain. We were able to make inferences that we had not previously considered. Social media, brand image, price, cleanliness, service, and variety of products offered were some of the categories in which we made discoveries and were able to relate to our target market.

N: 22 years old female
P: 23 years old female
Q: 19 years old male

What qualities help you favor one casual sit-down restaurant over another when it comes to deciding where to eat?

K: When I go out to eat I usually look at food quality, environment, and affordability. Even a casual sit-down can feel a little classier, or maybe more comfortable depending on decor, music, and service.
M: The food quality, the price, what am I hungry for, how long is the wait, how many people are with me.
N: Customer service, food quality, restaurant cleanliness, friendly and familiar faces.
P: Quality of service and price are pretty important. I don't like to be out that long for dinner and I also can't afford to spend a lot of money on something extravagant when I could just cook at home.
Q: Money, location, mood of what to eat, and person I'm with.

Would Chili's Grill & Bar be a restaurant you would consider visiting?

K: Not really. I have eaten at Chili's in the past, but the meals I've had there haven't been great. I prefer Applebee's.
M: Yes, have been there before it's one of my favorite chain restaurants.
N: No. I don't find their food unique or alluring if that can be used to describe food.
P: Yes, it's a casual and relatively cheap chain.
Q: No, past experience there has not been good with customer service and food options.

IN-DEPTH INTERVIEWS

Think Chili's Grill & Bar, what comes to mind when you think of their restaurant?
K: Since I am a millennial, the viral vine "Welcome to Chili's" comes to mind.
M: The Chili's logo and Mexican cantina style interior. Also, the breaking glass "Welcome to Chili's" Vine.
N: Grilled chicken, crusty booth seats and grimy tile floors.
P: Chain restaurant and beer deals.
Q: Applebee's... "Welcome to Chili's"... bad food.

Are your general perceptions of Chili's Grill & Bar negative, mixed, or positive? Why, from previous experience at the restaurant?
K: Most people my age don't really eat at Chili's, so my perceptions of its quality is neutral.
M: Positive. It's good food, I've had good waiters and customer service. Good to-go options as well.
N: I'd say I've had mostly positive experiences. I went there a lot as a kid and enjoyed it. I got steak. Like I said I don't find myself having a reason to go there now.
P: Overall positive, the service is normally good and I don't have to spend a lot of money or feel obligated to dress nicely.
Q: Not good! Previous experiences have not been good.

What foods make you think Chili's Grill & Bar?
K: I think of typical diner food, but scaled up a little. Meat dishes, healthy options, burgers, appetizers.
M: Grilled chicken, chips and salsa, sizzling fajita plates. I usually get a meal with some sort of grilled chicken, chips and salsa is always served, and sizzling fajitas going by are part of the atmosphere.
N: Wings, steak, grilled chicken, the blue slushies they had. These are all common things I have ordered there and really, I see these and other maybe "bar foods" as their menu.
P: Tex-Mex, spicy pasta, southwestern, chicken, chipotle bowls/tacos.
Q: Steak, burgers, and onion rings for some reason.

IN-DEPTH INTERVIEWS

In terms of its competition, how would you rank Chili's among Applebee's, TGI Friday's and other similar restaurants?

K: Applebee's is squashing Chili's in my view, I feel like Applebee's always has more customers.
M: Chili's is the best, then T.G.I. Friday's, and then poor Applebee's at the bottom.
N: I see Chili's in the middle of T.G.I. Friday's and Applebee's. The food isn't as good or the restaurant isn't as clean as T.G.I. Friday's, but it's better than Applebee's.
P: Honestly when it comes to cheap-o chain food restaurants, Chili's is close to the top of the list. It's better food than the others usually, and it's always pretty convenient and has a lot of different things to choose from.
Q: Probably near the bottom, kind of on a similar level as Applebee's in terms of [EXPLETIVE].

If Chili's Grill & Bar were a teenager, what high school clique would they be in?

K: Chili's is definitely the kid who genuinely wants to get good grades, but he isn't as naturally gifted as the nerd groups so he works extra hard. It doesn't belong to a clique because it's the student without any friends.
M: Basic.
N: I could definitely see them being a jock. They think they're hot stuff, but really, they're just average. Get it? Hot stuff like... peppers.
P: It's popular cause it's aesthetic, at least to me. It's got a flashy look, but not much to it after hanging out with them once or twice.
Q: Chili's is so basic, so probably the unforgettable clique.

OBJECTIVES & INSIGHTS

PREPARED AND PRESENTED BY

TARAH COCHRAN / OLIVIA RIGBY /
CHRISTIAN SANCHEZ / ARIANA STRAUGHAN / TARYN SOBEY

KEY RESEARCH INSIGHTS

DON'T BREAK THE BANK

Minimum wage jobs and the consistently increasing prices of college tuition might take a toll on a young adult's bank account. When it comes down to food options many consider the cheaper the better. In the primary research conducted, we found that many 18 to 24-year-old consider Chili's Grill & Bar selection of foods an expense cheap enough to visit the restaurant. An assortment of options consisting of cheaper foods leave the respondents of this study well fed and refreshed without breaking the bank.

GOING VIRAL

Companies in the 2010's are looking to create trends and viral sensations with their use of social media accounts on popular sites. Our primary research allowed us to understand where people may see Chili's advertisements the most, those being Facebook and Twitter. The association with the restaurant on the following websites might look reasonably different across both media platforms. A Chili's ad on Facebook might be more informational and classic in terms of stock online advertisements. While the Chili's ad on Twitter might allow itself to be taken less seriously, be more internet-friendly, and easier to share with click of a button. These media platforms are very important at specifically targeting young adults because a majority of time spent are by these individuals on their internet connected devices.

VARIETY IS GOOD

A small army entering a Chili's Grill & Bar would have the opportunity to each purchase different menu options from the other due to the restaurant's vast selection. Many of the responses favored the company's variety in terms of factors that led them to eat there. A multitude of menu options at reasonably affordable prices over less and more special variety is what our respondents resonated with the most. Our original hypothesis led us to believe that too many options would be a detriment to the chain restaurants customer base, but the primary research proved the opposite.

CLEAN UP YOUR IMAGE

Lame. Insecure. Unhealthy. Normal? Our research provided us with these word associations when we asked about what type of person eats at Chili's. Most of the words and phrases collected contain negative connotations that lead us to believe the brand needs some restructuring inside and out. Many respondents complained about the restaurants themselves being too dirty and of average quality, leading us to believe they need to update their brand perception.

DINING OUT IS THE NEW IN

The primary research conducted supported the idea that many young adults were choosing to eat out two or more times a week. Respondents were mostly single college students on a budget who wanted cheap foods and alcohol. Chili's Grill & Bar being an available option for those interested in the options they offer multiple times a week, go hand in hand in being the go-to place younger people might choose to spend their money.

THE PROBLEM

The main issue facing the Chili's Grill & Bar franchise is the sub-par sales paired with a decrease in the amount of traffic in the restaurant. The decline/stagnation of Chili's Grill and Bar sales can be attributed to three factors: consumer income, the shift in retail spending, and finally, the heightening interest in experience and service. While the U.S. economy has seen a trend of growth as of late, incomes are not rising at the same rate as household expenses. A household expense is the breakdown of general, everyday living expenses per-person. Living expenses are comprised of the cost of housing, food, utilities, and more. This means that as the cost of living expenses increases, that includes the amount it costs to eat out at a restaurant such as Chili's. Employment has increased and the stock market is doing well resulting in the cost of consumer products and services going up; however, income seems to be chasing after these price increases. This has resulted in consumers losing the ability to eat at casual-dining restaurants with food in the mid-level price range as frequently as they once did. While people wish they could eat out, they have had to cut back on the frequency of which they do so to stretch each dollar farther.

The second trend affecting both the traffic and sales of the Chili's franchise is the way in which retail spending has shifted overall, not just in the food industry. We once lived in a brick and mortar world where people went to the mall to buy their clothes and visited book stores to purchase reading material. Now, we buy clothes online and read from e-books. This online trend had trickled into the dining industry as well. Instead of visiting restaurants, customers have begun to utilize UberEats and prefer take-out rather than dining in. Customers also want the highest quality food in the shortest amount of time. This is reflected in the way diners have traveled from BJ's to Panera and from Chili's to Chipotle. Spending has shifted from in-stores to online and from casual dining to fast casual.

Lastly, customers have always wanted the best product, but now, this is not enough. In a world where quality burgers can be made by a number of stores, restaurants must also provide the most unique experience to attract diners. In the age of cell phones and social media, people who are dining out are on the hunt for the most photogenic locations and instagramable food selection. Restaurants must capitalize on the trends of the internet to capture the attention of all the people with their minds set on the next trendy food on Pinterest.

Chili's Grill & Bar has a fighting chance yet. If they are able to understand the trends of income, the way in which people buy and consume their meals, and the emphasis placed on experience on top of the products, Chili's will be able to increase traffic and sales (Peltz, 2017)

CREATIVE BRIEF

WHY ARE WE ADVERTISING?

Reposition Chili's as the leader in casual dining, by showing consumers the improved aspects of the company such as service and quality. With advertising, Chili's brand awareness should increase and portray the brand as a unique place to share affordable and great food.

WHO ARE WE TALKING TO?

Specifically in our campaign, we are focused on college age students 18-24. These consumers represent a growing target market for Chili's, one in which could revitalize the brand.

WHAT DO THEY CURRENTLY THINK?

The current perception of the company is decent. The target market enjoys the food, drinks, and service but nothing that would be considered amazing or great. Affordability and value is a large component as to why this market is likely to come to Chili's.

WHAT WOULD WE LIKE THEM TO THINK?

Chili's is not only good, but excellent. In regards to food, service, and overall quality of the restaurant. Value will always be high, the portion sizes large, and the prices low but Chili's is more than just affordable. It's a unique place to share with others, a "trending"spot, and will hold all elements of the dining experience to the highest level.

WHAT IS THE SINGLE MOST PERSUASIVE IDEA WE CAN CONVEY?

Chili's is "back", and it's here to stay. The recent baby back ad campaign shouts "Chili's is back", and this is what our targeted customers should know. It's not a boring, low priced, just okay place to go, Chili's is a great restaurant filled with great people who provided great service.

WHY SHOULD THEY BELIEVE IT?

Our consistent, informative, and credible message we will portray in the advertising campaign. The Chili's Bar and Grill people have always loved is still here, but all aspects of the brand will be elevated to new heights. As customers come into the restaurant, there will be greater attention to detail and immediate changes to overall quality of the brand image.

THE PROBLEM

The main issue facing the Chili's Grill & Bar franchise is the sub-par sales paired with a decrease in the amount of traffic in the restaurant. Chili's Grill & Bar has a fighting chance yet. If they are able to understand the trends of income, the way in which people buy and consume their meals, and the emphasis placed on experience on top of the products, Chili's will be able to increase traffic and sales (Peltz, 2017)

IDEA 1: REBRANDING

RESEARCH

Our teams primary research revealed that consumers view Chili's as low quality.

Would Chili's Grill & Bar be a restaurant you would consider visiting?

K: Not really. I have eaten at Chili's in the past, but the meals I've had there haven't been great. I prefer Applebee's.
M: Yes, have been there before it's one of my favorite chain restaurants.
N: No. I don't find their food unique or alluring if that can be used to describe food.
P: Yes, it's a casual and relatively cheap chain.
Q: No, past experience there has not been good with customer service and food options.

Are your general perceptions of Chili's Grill & Bar negative, mixed, or positive? Why, from previous experience at the restaurant?

K: Most people my age don't really eat at Chili's, so my perceptions of its quality is neutral.
M: Positive. It's good food, I've had good waiters and customer service. Good to-go options as well.
N: I'd say I've had mostly positive experiences. I went there a lot as a kid and enjoyed it. I got steak. Like I said I don't find myself having a reason to go there now.
P: Overall positive, the service is normally good and I don't have to spend a lot of money or feel obligated to dress nicely.
Q: Not good! Previous experiences have not been good.

SOLUTION

To combat the low quality image most people have of Chili's, we plan to rebrand.

We are taking Chili's from gross to gorgeous, from cheap to classy, and from basic to boujee - all while maintaining the same menu and low prices that our current customers base loves.

We are specifically looking to make sure chili's is still a player in the casual dining sector but we want to make sure it is a level above the competition. Our plan include addressing the main issues our research found that diners have with Chili's. We'd like to make Chili's unique by creating a new personality, improving customer service, and increasing quality. Some specific changes we would make to achieve this include Better employee training, new decor that differentiates Chili's, a greater presence on social media, new uniforms, and new serving plates and bowls.

IDEA 2: FAMILY FRIENDLY

RESEARCH

Our teams primary research revealed that many connect Chili's back to their childhood or younger days. When posed with the question "Fill in the blank with the first thing that comes to mind when you see [an image of Chili's]..." some of the answers included:
- Highschool
- Home
- Family grubbin'
- Been there thousands of times

Our consumers have a kind of nostalgic view of Chili's and think of it as part of their past.

SOLUTION

To capitalize on this, we want Chili's to = perfect for families.
Some of our ideas to create a family friendly environment include:
1.) Kids night
- Free dessert for families
- Kids eat free
- Seperate game night for families

2.) Better kids menu
- Better food
- Better entertainment value
- A golden ticket featured in some menus that is redeemable for a free kids meal at any time

3.) Promoting family values
- Social media campaign/heartfelt commercials
- A jar with conversation starters on each day to focus on family meals
- Electronic family kiosk games
- TV in bar only (keeping the dining area a space for families)

We hope to appeal to younger families as a great place for a weeknight or weekend dinner with the kids.

THE BIG IDEA: CHILI'S FAMILY

"FAMILY TIME IS SPELLED C-H-I-L-I-'S"

Through research and feedback we believe there is a great opportunity for the restaurant to cater towards families and children. Creating an environment that welcomes families with open arms will drive the brand's appeal but won't drive away already satisfied customers.

TWO BIG IDEAS TO GO ALONG WITH THE CAMPAIGN

In our survey a lot of people portrayed that they felt a sense of nostalgia and childhood when presented with the brand Chili's. This took a handful of people down memory lane and with that we are centring our big idea around targeting those young adults who have fond childhood memories in Chili's and trying to attract them and their families to come in. Along with our specific family-targeted events we will begin a family oriented making campaign on our platforms of social media, and advertisements. We are striving to do this with our deals like Family Night and Kids Eat Free Tuesdays. Specifically we would like to attract younger families who are looking to have "family time" with their children. At Chili's our family atmosphere will be prevalent, especially on Tuesdays for Kids Eat Free, and every first friday of the month for Family Game Night. Here are what the events would consist of:

Kids Eat Free Tuesdays: Kids Eat Free Tuesdays is designed to draw in more family crowds on that night since weekdays are the slowest days of the week. We want to encourage more young families and their children to make a presence at Chili's. This will persuade parents to come in and bring their children since they will eat free so it forces families to bond and make lifelong memories while eating at Chili's. Then their children will associate Chili's with their childhood and have a more favorable and nostalgic feeling towards Chili's.

Family Game Night: Family Game Night is a campaign designed to encourage consumers to bring their entire family to Chili's as a way to spend quality time together. In a world where parents and children alike are attached to electronics and neglect genuine conversations, Chili's aims to rebuild the bridge. Family Game Nights are on the first Friday of every month. We remove distractions such as TV's, provide games to play together, and have family friendly menus that will correct the distance created in families.

FEEDBACK ANALYSIS

From the feedback we received from Dr. Olsen, we gained insight that he preferred the family friendly idea over the re-branding idea. The aspects of the family friendly pitch that stood out to him was that it was cohesive and that he liked the aspect of Chili's bringing you back to your childhood. He also stated that this idea was pretty unique compared to the other groups pitching their ideas so ours would definitely stand out. Dr. Olsen also pointed out that we need to narrow in on the specifics of the game night idea we presented and how we would present/promote these ideas through media platforms.

Overall, Dr. Olsen was more enthusiastic about the family friendly pitch and relayed to us that there was more substance to that one over the re-branding one. This lead us to siding with him and furthering our Family Friendly campaign pitch.

Comment: Target younger families specifically based on the the age range of people you want coming to Chili's.

Solution: In order to reach a younger user base of people (millennials) who have children, we as a team have decided to use Youtube as a platform to get the message out.

Comment: Be more specific on what it means to have a game/kids night

Solution: Made a decision on the specific night that will be our "kids night". We will have specific kids eat free nights on Tuesday nights. We have also identified that the first Friday of every month will be Family Game Night.

Comment: Be creative and unique with the family friendly concept, you want to drive that specific point across.

Solution: Our team has used colorful, unique, and sentimental type ads to get the point to stick into people's minds that Chili's is the family place to be.

CREATIVE ELEMENTS

Our print ad for Together Tuesday's highlight the customer base, children and families by depicting happy children enjoying their food. Another aspect that is prominent in our ad is the highlighting of the new and improved children's menu. We have revived the children's menu to be tastier and please kids more than the old. This ad also highlights the amazing draw of "kids eat free".

CREATIVE ELEMENTS CONT.

For our family-style meals, this ad depicts our delicious food while highlighting the shareability of our items. If you order family style, you and your family will get a great deal and be brought together by the variety of quality items you have access to.

CREATIVE ELEMENTS CONT.

Our “Back Baby” print ad incorporates nostalgia of our old baby back ribs commercials and their revival you see on television today. Once again, we are encouraging consumers to bring their entire family. Chili’s recognizes the importance of family and knows that the young families of millennials is a so far untapped target market. Our beautiful print ads are an amazing way to highlight our new kid-friendly, family-oriented, youthful ideas.

YouTube Advertisement:

To advertise our message of Chili's being more family friendly and catering towards the young family demographic we will show short ad clips on YouTube videos. There will be 2 different videos that will play before the YouTube video begins. The first ad will be light hearted and fun to advertise "Kids Eat Free Tuesdays". The 15 second clip will consist of a child and mom arguing over what's for dinner and that she doesn't want to cook anything for the child and then the radio unexpectedly turns on and they hear the deal about kids eating free on Tuesday's at Chili's. Then both the mom and little boy look and each other with a smirk on their face.

The second ad will show a family bonding and growing closer together over a meal to advertise the "Family-Style Meals" Chilis offers. The 15 second ad will just pan around a Chili's showing all the families eating and enjoying their family style meals at Chili's. But in the commercial there will be sound bites of what the families are saying and it will be comments about how much they love spending time with each other and actually conversing with one another. Then the ad will be over and the end will be a screen that reads "Share the love with our Family-Style Meals".

Social Media Campaign: A Chili's Family

We would also like to incorporate a simple social media campaign. The idea is to send out weekly posts and notifications to alert customers on upcoming events. This campaign will also portray chili's in a very family - friendly way, including pictures of families at the restaurant along with personal testimonies from families.

Below is just one of the many Instagram, Facebook, and Twitter posts we will produce in our brand new "A Chili's Family Campaign".

TRANSLATION OF THE MEDIA

TELEVISION ADS

In order to generate wide-spread awareness for our new family-oriented brand as well as reach we will be utilizing five media channels: TV commercials, Instagram, Facebook, Youtube, and print ads. Through every media channel we choose, we are targeting the parents of children still living at home, this demographic is comprised mainly of young millennial families. We are placing a specific emphasis on the most accessible demographic with the most influence in purchase decisions - mothers.

We chose to advertise through television commercials because live TV is still has the highest average audience composition when you compare platforms. When looking at moms (working or stay-at-home), Nielsen has found that they spend the most time using the TV to view media, averaging 2 hours and 46 minutes of use daily. In order to capture the attention of stay-at-home moms, we have chosen to show our commercials on HGTV, Food Network, and Disney Channel. We have chosen these specific channels to show our television commercials because the audiences for these channels are mainly comprised of women. HGTV and Food Network are also being watched more and more by young people. 55% of the audience is made up of Gen Z and Millenials due to the fantasy elements. As for the Disney Channel, during the day, “Disney Junior” broadcasts shows intended for children who do not go to school yet. If these children are watching TV, their stay-at-home parent is next to them watching it as well.

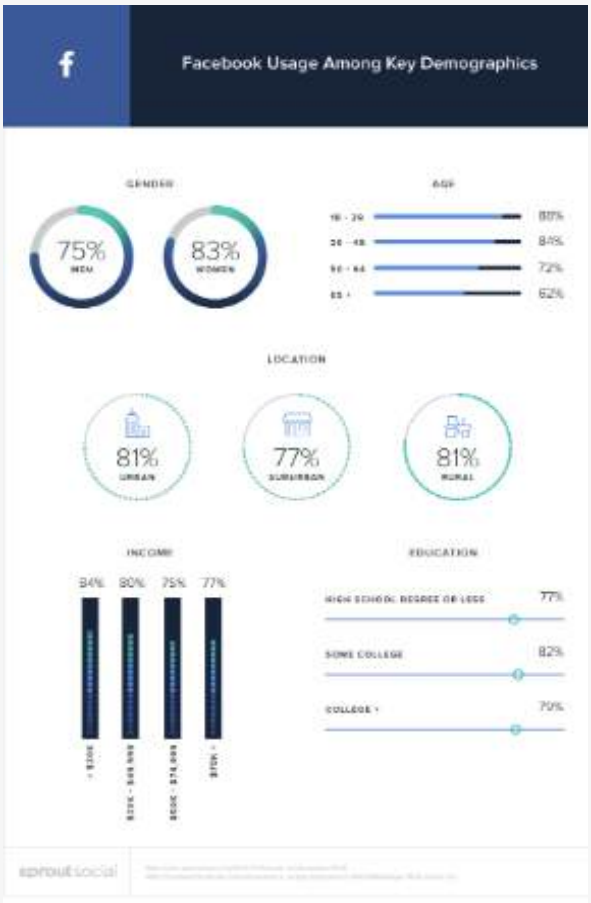

INSTAGRAM ADS

Second only to live TV, using apps and the web on phones and tablets are a popular outlet to view media. This large viewing makes using Instagram, Facebook, and YouTube ideal for placing our ads. Instagram is used by 64% of 18-29 year olds and 40% of 30-49 year olds. We would place ads in Instagram which show up in between the organic posts on someone's feed. We chose this outlet because instagrams ad manager allows us to specifically target our audience and monitor our results according to our goals due to the business analytics Instagram provides.

FACEBOOK ADS

Much like Instagram, Facebook is an accessible platform to advertise and show our content. Facebook's Ad Manager allows us to target specific areas, people, and other demographics. Facebook has access to a large segment of many demographics. 83% of women, 86% of people aged 18-49, educated, and people in all types of areas use Facebook. This gives us the ability to reach our target market and expand into different areas. This gives us a well-rounded view of who we have access to.

YOUTUBE ADS

YouTube is an ideal platform to advertise through because of the ability to align our ads with viewers interests. This goes beyond demographics and geography and makes our data more valid. By using psychographic characteristics to identify an audience, we are leaning on behavioral and lifestyle patterns to showcase our ideas to a segment that is more accepting of the changes. We would show our ads before makeup and cosmetics videos to capture a female audience. We would gain exposure among moms by placing ads before cooking, home making, and mom vlog content. To attract fathers to Chili's and to expand our reach, we would place ads before sports videos and other common "dad" videos. YouTube reaches over 200,000,000 unique visitors a month which is very promising.

PRINT ADS

Lastly, we will be using print ads to enhance the consumers ability to read at their own pace and go back to find information. We would like to place our ads in home improvement magazines to gain exposure to mothers and households. This makes it easy to see our ad, read it, reread it, go over different aspects for clarification, all while avoiding the feeling of being intrusive and disruptive. We would also use billboards because of the large number of people who see them everyday. Anyone can go to Chili's whether you have children or not. By using a billboard, we will make sure that we are still relevant amongst other audiences despite our emphasis on young families.

BILLBOARDS

THE PLAN DETAILS: COSTS

SOCIAL MEDIA POSTS

Based on figures and social media followers we find the following numbers for average costs per impressions:
-Facebook CPM is averaging $7.19 according to Q3 in 2018.
-Instagram CPM is averaging $7.91 according to Q1 in 2018. (the picture goes with IG)
-Youtube CPM is averaging between 6-8 dollars.
Our estimated impressions are on the conservative side due to the wide reach of Youtube and other platforms we may see a greater number of impressions.
Estimated Impressions: 7,000,000 (based on followers and reach)
Estimated costs: $51,000

TV COMMERCIALS

By combing target market numbers and average number of TV viewers per channel we found the following figures. The average CPM of a TV ad is around $25.
Estimated Impressions:
2,700,000
Estimated costs:
67,500 not including production or other costs

PRINT ADS

Because we have chosen to stick to local magazines and not big brand names our impressions and costs will be lower but more impactful.
Estimated Impressions: 1,500,000
Estimated costs: $15,000

THE PLAN DETAILS: SCHEDULE

FACEBOOK

For our ad we are targeting moms, parents and millennial families. We will post our ads on Facebook that advertise Kids Eat Free Tuesdays and Family Night Fridays that occur on the first Friday of the month. For the Kids Eat Free Tuesdays, we will post on Monday reminding people about the deal at 12pm because from 10am to 3pm on weekdays is the safest time to post on Facebook. We will then post the same advertisement on Tuesday around 3pm as a last-minute reminder about the deal. Then for our Family Night Friday we will post on the first Thursday of the month at 1pm and 2pm telling people about the promotion because the best time to post on Facebook is Thursday at 1pm and 2pm. By using Facebook, we believe we can easily reach out to our target market and with these specific times of posting we will reach the most consumers effectively.

INSTAGRAM

Instagram is a heavily used social media platform for millennials and young parents. With this platform, we are hoping to reach those individuals to increase sales at Chili's. We will use Instagram to post our advertisements relaying information about Kids Eat Free Tuesdays and Family Night Fridays. The most popular times to post on Instagram are Wednesdays at 3pm, Thursdays at 5 am and 11am and Fridays at 5am. Since Instagram is one of the most popular social media platforms we plan on heavily advertising using this. We plan to post about our Family Night Fridays on the first Wednesday of the month at 3pm, the first Thursday of the month at 5am and 11am and then on the day of the promotion, Friday, at 5am. We will do this so that the customer will frequently run across our ad and be reminded of the deal. Then for the Kids Eat Free Tuesday we will post twice every Tuesday promoting the advertisement. Once at 11am and then again at 5pm right before dinner. We will post at those times because the safest time to post on Instagram occur on Tuesdays from 9am to 6pm.

YOUTUBE

YouTube is becoming increasingly prevalent to young children and they spend a lot of their time watching videos on that platform. Also, seeing that young kids are watching videos on this I would assume parents would be nearby to monitor what they are looking at so this is a perfect platform to reach out to families and young children.

We plan on doing a non-skippable video ad before videos that are kid friendly and are kid content. We would have our two videos, the family friendly one promoting Kids Eat Free Tuesdays and the family bonding one promoting Family Style Meals, running on certain videos all day. We used the non-skippable ads because we want the audience to see the whole video so they have insight to what our deals are and it is a "longer and more powerful way to tell a deeper, more nuanced story." Also, non-skippable ads can only be 15-20 seconds so even though people might get frustrated they can't skip, the ads aren't 30 seconds long anymore so they won't be as frustrated.

TELEVISION

The channels that are the most fitting to our target market is Disney Channel, TLC and HGTV. Disney Channel is most commonly viewed by children and their parents are probably with them while they watch most of the time so it is also a good place to reach the parents of a child. And then TLC and HGTV mostly target women, mothers and a handful of men. We plan to run 30 second commercials on those channels throughout the day. For Disney Channel, we would play a commercial at 7am, when most children are awake and watching either before they go to school or on a Saturday morning. Then we would play another commercial at 3pm when most children are back from school and then another one at 7pm right before the children go to bed. These are prime times to get a good reach. For HGTV and TLC we would run the commercials at 6pm, 8pm and 10pm. We will play these ads on Monday, Friday and Sunday every week for a year. Since mothers and fathers can be at work all day, we don't want to waste money to run a commercial when they aren't watching, so this is why we picked later in the night to run the commercials so the adults will be viewing them.

PRINT

We will be placing our ads in local magazines you can find in grocery stores or pharmacies because we feel this magazine reaches our target market of family friendly mothers and is the cheaper option. Also, most mothers go grocery shopping so it is the perfect place to place them. We will run our ads in those local magazines for 6 months and then evaluate our reach and its effectiveness. Another way to effectively advertise is by renting out two billboards to put our Kids Eat Free Tuesday print ad on it and the Family Game Night ad on it also. We will place these ads somewhat near a Chilis but also place one next to an elementary school and one will be placed by a grocery store like target or walmart. These billboards will be rented out for 3 months to spread awareness of our deals and generate customers while doing so.

THE PLAN DETAILS: BUDGET

Accumulated Marketing Budget: $185,000

Family Focused Campaign: $74,060,000

Primary Media: $42,120,000.

Televised Ad Circulation: $42,120,000.
Supporting Social Media: $14,500,000
YouTube: $5,000,000
Facebook: $4,750,000
Instagram: $4,750,000
Supporting Print Media: $2,440,000
Magazines: $1,000,000
Billboards: $1,440,000

Additional Creative Costs: $15,000,000*
*including $350,000 televised production costs

Media Budget Justifications:

Per previous annual marketing efforts, Chili's Grill & Bar has exceeded an advertisement and total marketing expenditures of $200,000,000 as noted by Statista. Previous years have shown a decline in allocation of ad spending, due to company and industry performance. Despite a former decrease in budget, Chili's and Brinker International Inc. as a whole, have increased sales leading up to fiscal 2018 quarters for the first time. Recommending the allocated budget that doesn't exceed the previous $200,000,000 and instead coming to a compromise and determining the new marketing budget of $185,000,000 was an important factor in the decision-making process. Specifically, coming to a conclusive standpoint on the total amount Chili's should spend on the new family-focused ad campaign proved to be a challenge with less money than previously spent, but using that money to move focus towards one familiar target market is important. At the $74,060,000 figure included in the aggregate marketing amount, the company is determined to shift its company forward with family.

Primary Media:

Televised commercial airings on certain broadcast networks comes at an expense at every step along the way. According to industry average, the production costs of filming a national television advertisement is $350,000. The attributed funds of production includes renting the location, building and drawing up the set-pieces, paying the actors and director, and all the staff used to create the ad which has proven to be an expensive expenditure especially at a national level. Next is determining the budget of a 30-second television ad on a traditional family-friendly channel, which our research has concluded to costs Chili's around $50,000 per spot. The plan includes 3 televised spots throughout the day, 3 times a week, for 52 weeks totaling the annual year. The total airings of the ad on the kids-friendly, channel alone equal 468 unique spots a year with a total $23,400,000 spent on the specific channel. Similarly, airing the televised advertisements on cable networks like HGTV and TLC which air to less viewers amounts to around $40,000 pers spot, with an identical plan to the kid's channel airings, brings the total of $18,720,000 to advertise on the two channels. Lastly, we've determined that overall primary ad spending equals $42,120,000.

Supporting Social Media:

We've considered deploying Chili's Grill & Bar advertisements throughout various social media platforms including YouTube, Facebook, and Instagram. The target market researched makes up millennial parents including those on the aforementioned websites. Rates associated with 30-second non-skippable YouTube ads, have indicated based on our research that each viewed ad tolls $0.20 per view. Meaning, if a quarter of the 200 million unique YouTube visitors a month watch the ad, that would set back the company about $5,000,000 to align itself with platform. On Facebook, according to the 2015 Salesforce Advertising index, ads calculated by costs per click average $0.19 for the food and beverage industry. We've concluded that reaching a goal of 25 million people to engage in the throughout the campaign equal $4,750,000. In similar fashion, Instagram ads are of familiar stature to that of Facebook in terms of costs per click and engagement, another addition of $4,750,000. Social media prices solely attribute to the allocated $14,500,000 social media budget.

Supporting Print Media:

Furthermore, the family-focused campaign requires a print route to advertise to the target market as well. Magazines allowing mothers to familiarize themselves with the ad through constant reminders, would be best shown in a home improvement magazine according to our research. Advertising in the 3 most popular national magazines in this category that typically showcase one issue per month would be on average $1,000,000, that is an average of $20,000 per issue for 12 months. In addition to print media, billboards across the country near relevant locations familiar to millennial mothers is also required. Our research has indicated that on average a billboard yields $12,000 per month in the most densely populated cities around the United States. Choosing 5 popular cities to bolster a single Chili's billboard up per location total $144,000 annually. Determining the 2 best locations within each city to put the company's billboards up in each city has rounded out to be about $1,440,000 across the 5 cities. The total print media price tag surmounts to $2,440,000 of the campaign finances.

Additional Creative Costs:

Additionally, all media avenues considered, we've determined Chili's Grill & Bar should spend up to $15,000,000 on content creation, unique concepts for each primary and supporting ads, in order to drive the point across that in each restaurant here is home for every family.

THE SUMMARY

CATTO AGENCY

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Chili's Grill & Bar was founded in Dallas, Texas in 1975. Present in over 32 countries, Chili's strives to provide a social and family-friendly environment serving tex-mex food. Classified as a casual-dining restaurant, Chili's is one of many, including TGI Friday's, Ruby Tuesday, and Chuy's. Currently, Chili's is facing a decrease in customers, alongside other restaurants in the industry, due to the popularity of upscale and mid-priced fast casual restaurants like Chipotle and Panera Bread. It is necessary for Chili's to differentiate themselves and increase their perceived value in order to regain their customer base.

Through our primary research, we discovered that many connected Chili's to their childhood. Survey responses about a photo of Chili's included "family grubbin", "been there a thousand times", multiple "highschool", and even "home". People feel a sense of nostalgia toward the restaurant. Based on this research and feedback, we believe there is an huge opportunity for Chili's to strengthen their brand as a family restaurant. With these insights in mind, we decided on a strategic, family-oriented approach that will take past customers down memory lane and create an ideal environment for young families to form those memories.

Our family-oriented campaign will be executed through in-store deals aimed at attracting younger families looking to spend quality time with their children. Kids Eat Free Tuesday is an IMC campaign designed to draw in families on weeknights, as they are the slowest days of the week. With free kids meals on Tuesdays, we hope to encourage young families to bond over dinner while at Chili's, creating a favorable and nostalgic association towards Chili's. Family Game Night is an IMC campaign also designed to encourage family time together. Taking place on the first Friday of each month, Family Game Night is focused on removing distractions such as TV's and providing families with games to play together.

The introduction of Chili's family-oriented campaign will boost business right away by bringing in families to our in-store deals. It will also create lasting business growth by strengthening Chili's specific brand and creating nostalgic feelings in the children of its customers.

CAMPAIGN EVALUATION

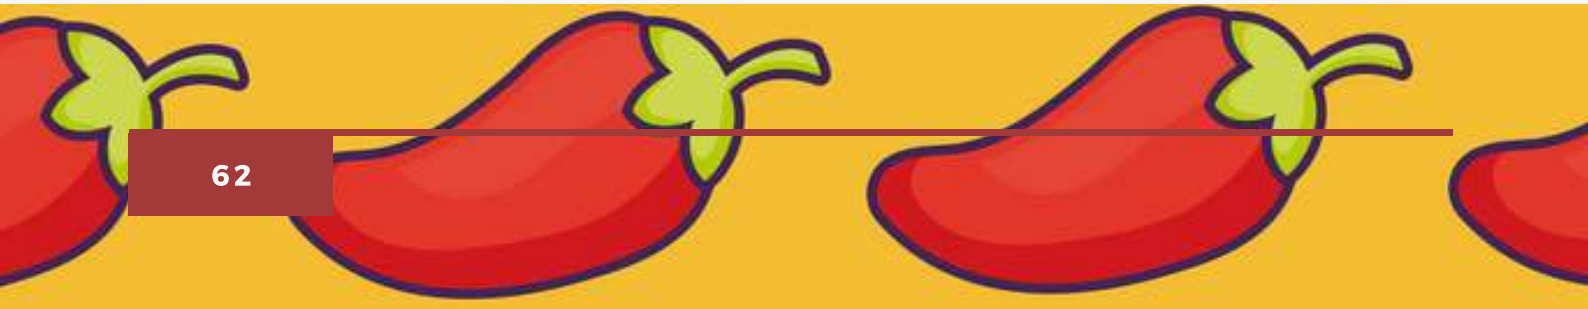

We will be able to measure the success of our campaigns to bring young families to Chili's by looking specifically at our sales from our monthly Family Game Night and our Kids Eat Free Tuesdays. We will know if our campaign is successful by measuring both the traffic brought into restaurants on these promotional nights as well as measuring the total sales. We will also be able to measure our success within our past goals involving social media platforms and the effects they have on our followers and target market.

Measuring traffic is a great indicator of whether our Family Game Night and Kids Eat Free Tuesday campaigns have a significant reach and generate awareness for our new brand focus. If a lot of families are dining at Chili's, we know that our campaign has been successful because it has caused young millenials and their children to come in to eat. Looking at total sales for the nights of our campaigns will measure our success because it will indicate if families are coming to Chili's and spending time sitting at our restaurant, enjoying family time, and ordering from our new family/sharing menu and our new and improved kids menu.

CAMPAIGN EVALUATION

Another way to measure the success of our campaign and the overall success of Chili's is to use our social media goals we set in the past. We set specific goals of how many followers, likes, and engagements we wanted to generate over a certain period of time. With these goals we can measure exactly who is interacting with Chili's and on what posts. Our past objective was to raise Chili's engagement rate on Instagram from what it is currently, 2.7%, to a high engagement rate of 3.5% so we will be able to measure those numbers to see how successful our Family Game Night and Kid Eat Free Tuesday campaigns are. By using our social media platforms we can measure which of those campaigns are performing well and which campaign is performing poorly on our social media platforms. Our past objective was to Increase instagram followers by 25% which means increasing our followers from 282,000 to 352,500, so by doing this we will be able to see and measure exactly how much our campaign has improved on our social media platforms. We can use these results to then improve the way we display the campaign and how we reach our target market on our platforms. Our social media goals can be measured efficiently and will help with future sales, online interactions and encouraging more customers to come to Chili's

Furthermore, Chili's Grill & Bar will be able to use our research moving forward with our current campaign objectives. Capturing the target market of younger families, rather than its more broad appeal across multiple segments the chain is currently known for. Revisiting our primary research previously obtained, we felt that people's opinions of the restaurant leaned negative in terms of cleanliness and uninspiring brand appeal. Due to these complaint, we first sought to address general brand appeal until we brainstormed our final marketing strategy. We stand by our further primary and secondary research to reach our finalized objective goals and stick by our new focus on family.
