SUMMER 2019

SOCIAL MEDIA CAMPAIGN

MAYS BUSINESS SCHOOL

Prepared by: Marina Buttecali, Luis Obregon,
Kenzie Herring, and Christian Sanchez

Table of Contents

Part 1: Overview

- University of Michigan: social media strategy review (p. 4-7)
- University of Texas: social media strategy review (p. 8-11)
- Detailed critique (p. 12)

Part 2: Target Audience

- Facebook profiles (p.15-17)
- Instagram profiles (p. 19-21)

Part 3: Survey Data

- Key findings (p. 22- 27)
- What we learned (p. 28)

Part 4: Key Takeaways

- Sample posts (p. 30-32)
- Implementation (p. 33)

Appendix

- Profile interview questions(p. 34)
- Survey questions (p. 35-39)
- References (p. 40)

Part 1: Overview

Part 1 of our report will provide an overview of how other universities use social media for information dissemination, and how this can be used as an example for Mays Business School. We will be focusing on Facebook and Instagram.

For our analysis, we will analyze the social media strategies of the University of Michigan's Ross School of Business and the University of Texas' McCombs School of Business. We will describe their posting frequency, tone, interactivity, and navigability. The merits and demerits of their social media approach will be highlighted as well.

Part 1 will conclude with a detailed critique of a post from the University of Texas.

The University of Michigan
ROSS SCHOOL of BUSINESS

UM has a designated team within their Department of Communications that specifically focuses on the planning and execution of their social media strategy.

"Our goal is to be a global pillar of excellence in social communications".

The University of Michigan believes that social media is "rooted in strategy and collaboration". While the goal of social media is to be interactive and engaging to the user, UM expresses in their Social Media Best Practices that this "does not negate the need to have associated goals, thoughtful design, and clear expectations for performance, accountability, and value added".

Their Facebook Strategy

32,857
FOLLOWERS

The Ross School of Business only posts to their Facebook page about 1-2 times per week. Their user interactivity is quite low, with an average of about 50 likes per post and only a few shares.

Their posts consist of content generated by Ross that highlights the accomplishments and offerings associated with the business school's students, faculty, and staff. They occasionally post articles from outside sources that they believe will interest their followers, but nothing that encourages user engagement.

Their Facebook posts have a common theme and tone of professional development and academia. Navigating through their Facebook page is clear and easy for the user. The menu bar on the left hand side of their profile page makes it easy for visitors to search for photos, videos, posts, etc.

Their Instagram Strategy

"Social media is rooted in strategy and collaboration."- UM

The Ross School of Business' Instagram page uses the same posting frequency as their Facebook page by only posting 1-2 times per week.

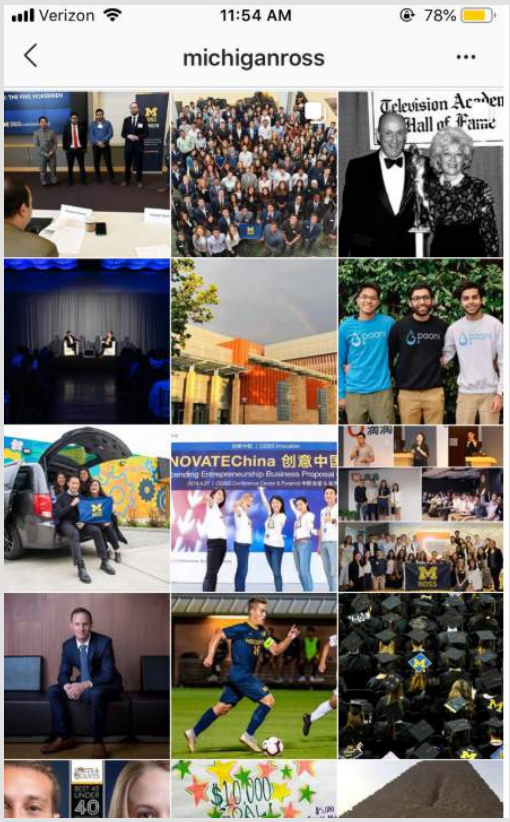

Their Instagram page follows the same trend of posting content that showcases student and staff accomplishments. However, Ross recognizes that Instagram is the preferred social media platform among college students, so they do make an attempt to incorporate student-generated content into their timeline.

Navigating their Instagram profile is very easy to do. Ross has added a menu feature to the top of their profile page that allows the user to select the specific content that they would like to view (pictured below).

12,200

FOLLOWERS

Merits & Demerits

Merits

The University of Michigan excels at creating and highlighting information simply by including a broad level of organizational tactics across each social media platform with ease. By using content calendars (pictured to the right) for both Facebook and Instagram, UM is able to coordinate their posting effectively. Their dissemination of content is methodical, which is why they only post a couple of times a week. The University of Michigan states that people value organized content, using social media as a tool in its curation.

Demerits

The overall tone of Ross's social media platforms appeals more towards an older demographic, such as alumni. While they are successful in expressing their professionalism and academic achievements, this type of content does not necessarily grab the attention of their students. Especially with Instagram, Ross should try to follow in the footsteps of the main UM page by trying to be more aesthetic and appealing to a younger audience.

The University of Texas

McCOMBS SCHOOL of BUSINESS

"We aim to bring to life achievements of the Texas community. Integrate communications approach across channels. Engage audiences through calls to action and shareable content."- UT set new standards

respect & ethics

elevate the brand

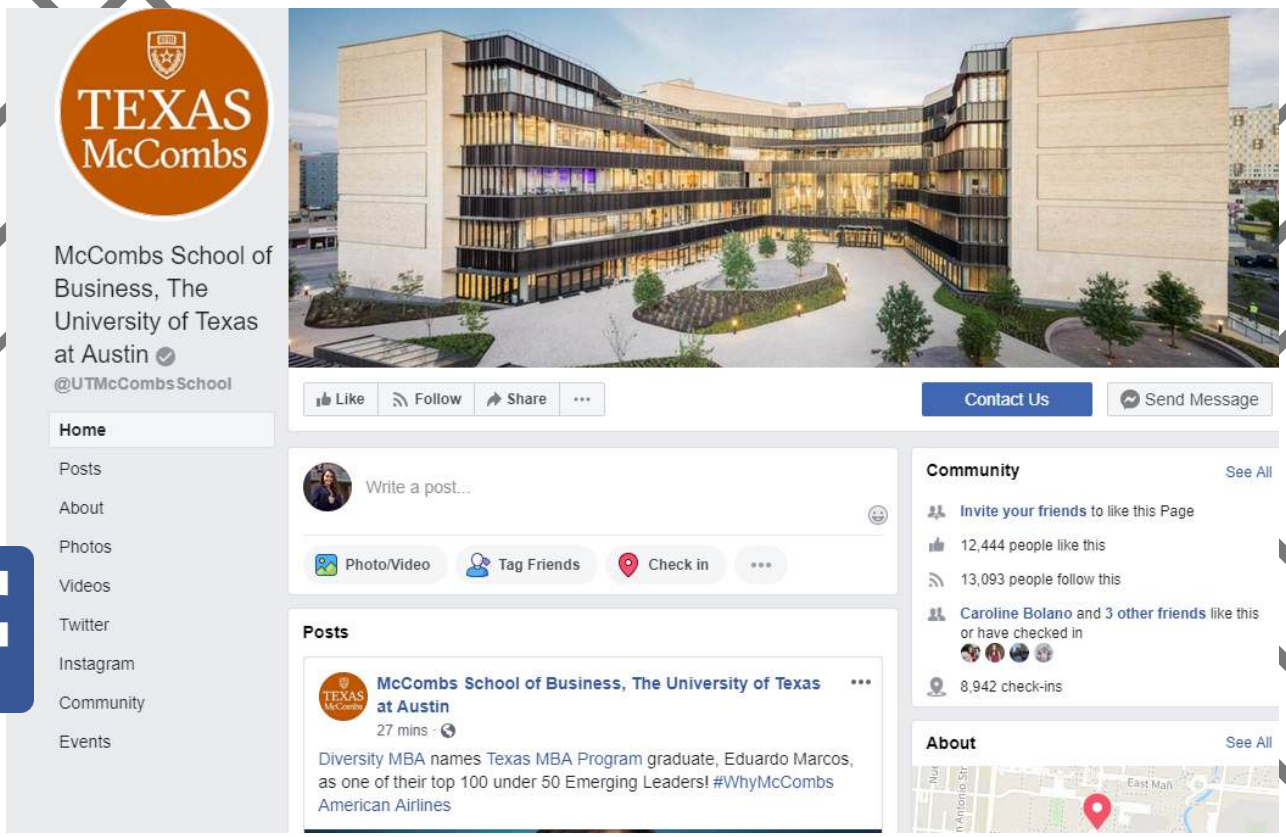

accuracy & honesty

create inspiring content

value & interest personality

stay on strategy

transparency & disclosure

Their Facebook Strategy

The McCombs School of Business is very active on social media and they understand that their content reaches a variety of audiences. In order to appeal to their 13,093 Facebook followers, McCombs posts 1-2 times per day. However, their follower interactivity is not very impressive. Their content includes alumni and student accomplishments, research articles, relevant current events, and campus resources. Overall, their posts are still restricted to promoting the prestige of the school.

While their page is not strictly comprised of university-generated content, there is still a common theme of professionalism and academia. The user demographics of Facebook tend to lean towards an older age group, so UT and McComb's aim to maintain their "higher end" image.

Their home page is very easy to navigate, with a user-friendly menu bar on the left side for narrowing down searches. All links to original posts that McCombs might share are also provided in the caption for the user's convenience.

Their Instagram Strategy

6,329

FOLLOWERS

The McCombs School of Business uses their Instagram platform to focus more on the achievements of their students. McCombs recognizes that Instagram is the preferred social media platform for their students, so they appeal to this audience by posting more student-generated content. While their timeline still has a sense of professionalism and scholarship, the stream of posts on their Instagram has a more relaxed feel and tone (pictured below).

Compared to their Facebook page, McCombs scales back the posting frequency on their Instagram to just once every 2 days. However, the user interactivity is much higher on their Instagram even though they do not post as often. Their most recent posts have received upwards of 200 likes.

McCombs keeps their captions simple and to the point. Any hashtags that are used in the caption are consistent across all of their social media platforms in order to maximize that hashtag's engagement.
Navigating their Instagram profile is made easy with a menu feature that categorizes their posts for easy searching.

Merits & Demerits

Merits

McCombs' Instagram strategy does a great job of blending professional and student-generated content at an appropriate frequency. The aesthetic of the timeline is methodical and hosts a variety of posts that keep their followers interested and engaged. They manage to create a more relaxed social media platform for their students, while also highlighting their academic successes. McComb's Instagram account serves as a great example of how business school does not just have to be about business.

Demerits

McCombs' greatest demerit in their social media strategy is the extreme formality of their Facebook page. While it is clear that their posts are geared towards an older demographic, it seems quite dull due to a lack of variety and excitement . Although this approach successfully reflects the university’s prestige, this type of content might be the reason why their Facebook page does not receive a lot of engagement and interactivity from their followers.

Post Critique

This Instagram post from the McCombs School of Business showcases several of their students painting a mural alongside a local Austin artist, Karen Maness.

The caption includes multiple hashtags and tags in order to maximize their reach and engage their followers. Using #MondayMotivation in the caption not only aligns with Instagram trends and appeals to a social media- savvy audience, but also serves as a token of encouragement.

This post is a great representation of how McCombs uses their Instagram platform to combine professional development with creativity, inspired by their very own students. Collaborating with a local artist and the Texas Performing Arts Center emphasizes that business school can also be a creative and artistic process.

FACEBOOK

PROFILES

Profile A

40 year old male participant

Profile A is employed full-time and spends his free time enjoying the outdoors and other leisure activities.

He initially joined Facebook back in 2008 in order to keep in touch with common groups and to stay up-to-date on events with friends and family.

Profile A logs on to Facebook once every few hours, mostly to use the Facebook Messenger feature to stay in touch with friends and family. While scrolling though his feed, Profile A frequently engages with other people's posts in the form of likes and comments. He posts to his own page once a week, but shares content posted by others more than twice a week.

Profile A follows The University of Texas at Austin and Texas State University. He enjoys reading about their breakthroughs in research and detailed articles about how the university is impacting the surrounding community. In fact, Profile A wishes that they would post more frequently to their Facebook page, since this is where he spends most of his time on social media.

Compared to other social media platforms, Profile A believes that the content posted on Facebook lacks personality and can be somewhat dull.

Profile B

56 year old female participant

Profile B is unemployed and has four older kids. She lives a very active and health- conscious lifestyle.

She signed up for Facebook back in 2008 in order to keep up with her former school's alumni page. She logs only once a day for 3-5 minutes at a time only to scroll through new posts on her feed. Profile B hardly ever posts her own content or engages with content posted by others.

Profile B follows William Paterson University on Facebook and says that their home page is very "basic" and uninteresting. She finds that they post more frequently to their Instagram page and wishes that they would post more often on Facebook. She would like to see more content regarding former alumni, faculty photos, and reunion information.

Profile B believes that academic facebook pages could increase their engagement from the older audiences that use Facebook by targeting alumni.

Profile C

48 year old female participant

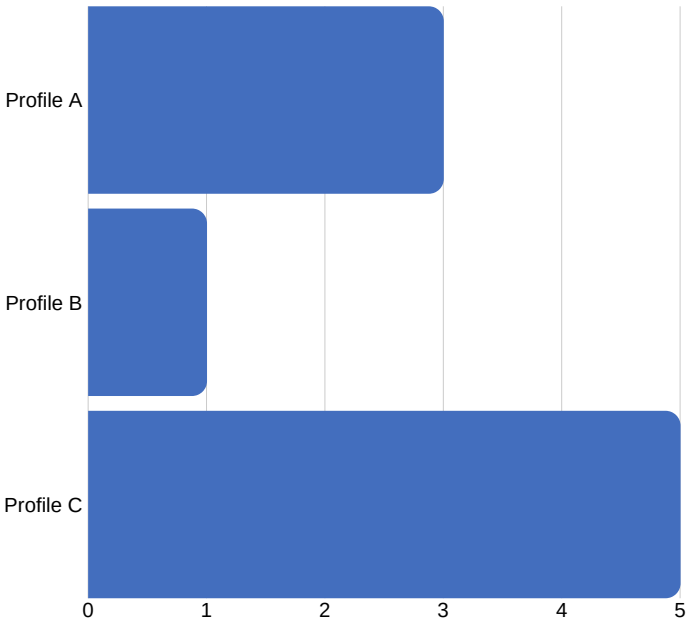

Profile C is employed full time and has three kids.

She created a Facebook account in order to connect with her friends and family, and for online shopping. She logs on every day for about 20 minutes at a time, totally a few hours each day.

Profile C mostly spends her time on Facebook scrolling through posts and will occasionally like or share content she finds humorous or cooking- related. She avoids engaging with posts that are political or controversial. She only posts to wish someone a "happy birthday" or to use the Facebook Marketplace feature. The content that Profile C enjoys seeing most include recipes, online boutiques, and news stories.

Profile C follows Angelo State University, her alma mater, on Facebook. She finds that their pages are clean, easy to use, and the content is very informative. Angelo State posts university updates, recent student activities and achievements, and upcoming events. They only post once a day, which Profile C finds perfectly adequate in order to hold people's interest, but not crowd their feed.

She believes that academic pages could be more appealing to their audience by posting content that is more exciting and targeted towards a specific group of people, rather than trying to capture their entire follower base.

The chart to the left represents how many times a day (x-axis) our Facebook profile interviewees log on to their accounts.

INSTAGRAM

PROFILES

Profile A

23 year old female participant

Profile A is employed full time and has interests in photography and videography. She originally created an Instagram account because everyone else she knew had one. Now, she uses it to showcase her creativity.

Profile A starts off her mornings by launching the Instagram mobile app and checking the Instagram Stories feature as well as any notifications she might have. Profile A checks Instagram multiple times throughout the day.

Profile A actively engages with close friends on Instagram by liking and commenting on their posts. If it is a post by a celebrity or acquaintance, she will usually just give it a like. Profile A posts daily to her poetry account and only once a month to her personal account.

Profile A follows Youngstown State's Instagram account, and enjoys their posts that display the campus's scenery, landscape, and creative arts. She notices that the university's posting schedule is inconsistent and wishes that they would post more often. Additionally, she wishes that academic pages would focus more on student groups and communities, rather than just advertise for big events and alumni.

Some of Profile A's favorite Instagram accounts:

Shannon Berveridge (@nowthisisliving, @nowthisisfilm), Halsey (@iamhalsey), Alfie Deyes (@afliedeyes), Orion Carloto (@orionvanessa), Joey Graceffa (@joeygraceffa)

Profile B

24 year old female participant

Profile B is employed full time and enjoys photography in her free time.

She created an Instagram account to share her photography with the Instagram community, however she does not post very often. She checks Instagram about 3-5 times a day for about 5-15 minutes each time.

Profile B actively engages with followers who send her direct messages, but mostly just scrolls through her feed without liking or commenting on posts. She enjoys posts that relate to cooking, DIY projects, and anything else creative that can be replicated at home.

Profile B follows the University of Texas at Austin's Instagram page, but she does not enjoy their content very much. While she appreciates the aesthetic they are aiming for, the posts in general are "too academic" for her tastes. However, she does think that they have achieved a great posting schedule, and post just the right amount to keep their followers engaged. Profile B says she would like to see UT post of the campus and students on campus rather than just academics.

Profile C

24 year old female participant

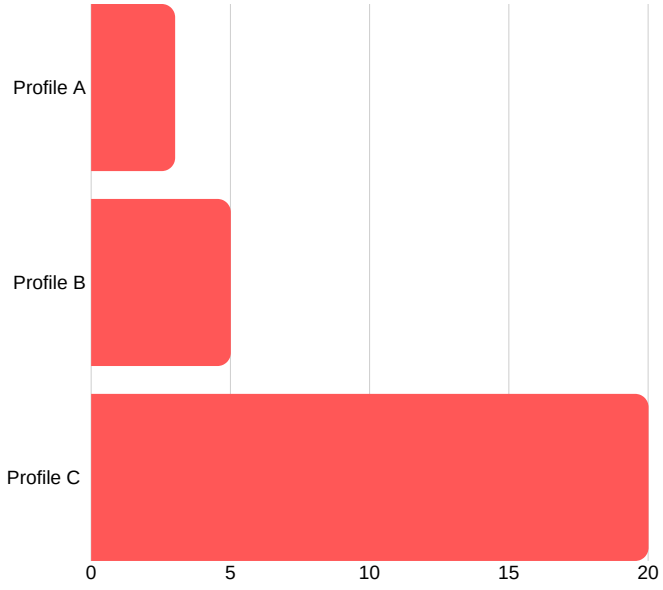

Profile C is a full-time registered nurse, newlywed, and mother of one.

She created a Facebook account because everyone else that she knew had one and she liked the concept of an image-based media platform.

Profile C logs on 20-30 times a day but only for 4-5 minutes at a time whenever she has downtime. She mostly just scrolls through her feed just to see what people are up to and will only like, comment, or share a few posts here and there. She posts to her own page a few times a month to share pictures of her son and husband. The types of posts that she enjoys seeing relate to friends and family, online shopping, humor, and health and beauty.

Profile C follows Texas Tech and Texas State University. She says that both pages are pretty standard in appearance and their posts tend to be "kind of boring and uneventful". The posts she enjoys seeing most are from the perspective of the students or posts created by the students. She says that both schools post an adequate amount to their page and are not too excessive.

Profile C believes that academic pages should target their posts to a younger audience around the ages of 18-22, since this is the age group that majority of college students are. She feels that they focus too much on targeting alumni even though Instagram is the preferred social media platform amongst college students.

The graph above shows how many times a day (x-axis) our Instagram profile interviewees log on to their accounts. Our Instagram profiles check their accounts more frequently than Facebook users.

Part 3: Survey Data

In Part 3 of our campaign, we created and distributed a survey that asked respondents 16 questions pertaining to their lifestyle, social media consumption, and social media preferences. The survey also included current Facebook and Instagram posts that have been posted by Mays Business School, as well as a new sample post that was created.

Our goal was to receive at least 40 complete responses, half being from our age group of 16-35 and the other half from our age group of 40-60.

The data extracted from the survey will be analyzed in order to reach a conclusion as to how Mays Business School can improve their social media strategy.

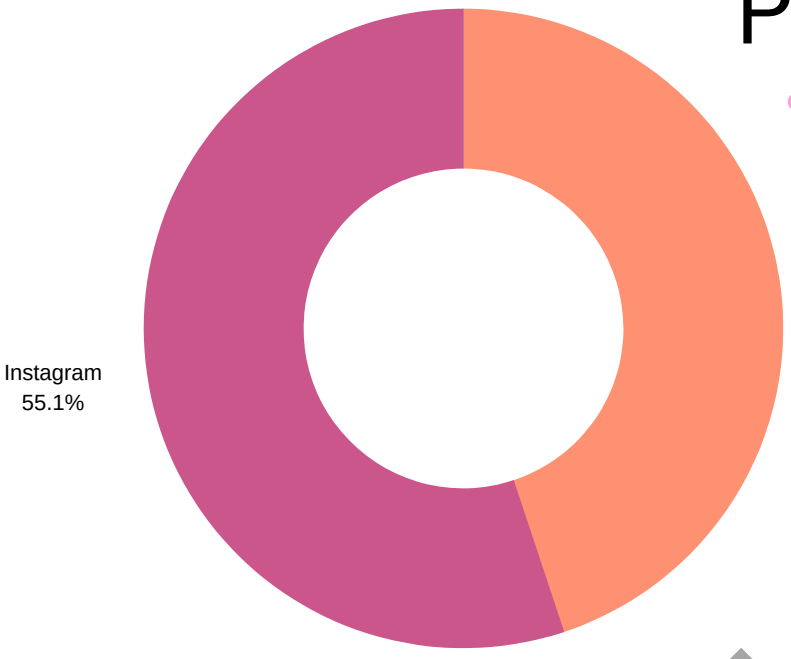

Age Distribution

Our survey received a total of 49 complete responses, all of which fell within one of our two target audiences. One of our goals when distributing the survey was to have a relatively equal number of respondents from both age groups. As explained in Part 2, the younger age group is being targeted through Instagram and the older age group is being targeted through Facebook.

As a whole, 73.47% of our respondents said they were employed full-time and 49% described their lifestyle as "pretty busy" on a daily basis.

Preferred Platform

The age distribution for our survey almost exactly aligns with that age group's preferred social media platform.

After analyzing this data, we found that there is a strong and statistically significant relationship between age and preferred platform. A regression gave us a P-Value of .0001 and accounted for 56.7% of the variability in the data set. We can conclude that a younger audience prefers Instagram and an older audience prefers Facebook.

Social Media Preferences

On average, respondents said they logged on, or opened the app, to their preferred social media platform 5 times a day for about 17.65 minutes each time. However, 36.73% said they only post original content once a week and 28.57% said that they hardly post at all. Even though the majority of respondents do not actively post their own content, they do enjoy engaging with other content on their feed. About 63% said that they would be somewhat or extremely likely to engage with other user's posts in the form of likes, comments, and/or shares.

We wanted to gain a general understanding of the types of content our respondents enjoyed seeing on their Instagram or Facebook. The graph pictured above represents various content categories that our respondents liked the most. Respondents were allowed to choose more than one category, and posts from family and friends was the most popular by far. The second most popular category was Health & Fitness.

As we craft recommendations for Mays Business School's social media strategy, it is important to recognize what types of content users are interested in outside of academia. Posting content that is more relatable to their preferences could lead to greater user engagement.

We included three Facebook posts by Mays Business School and asked respondents to select the post that they found most interesting and would enjoy learning more about.

- Post #1: Alumni and their accomplishments
- Post #2: Students interacting with faculty and staff members
- Post #3: Companies and outside organizations and how they relate to Mays Business School (pictured to the right)

46.94% of respondents selected Post #3, followed closely by Post #2. Users like to see how Mays Business School interacts with popular companies that their students might end up working for one day.

Mays Business School

We also included four Instagram posts by Mays Business School because this platform targets a younger audience.

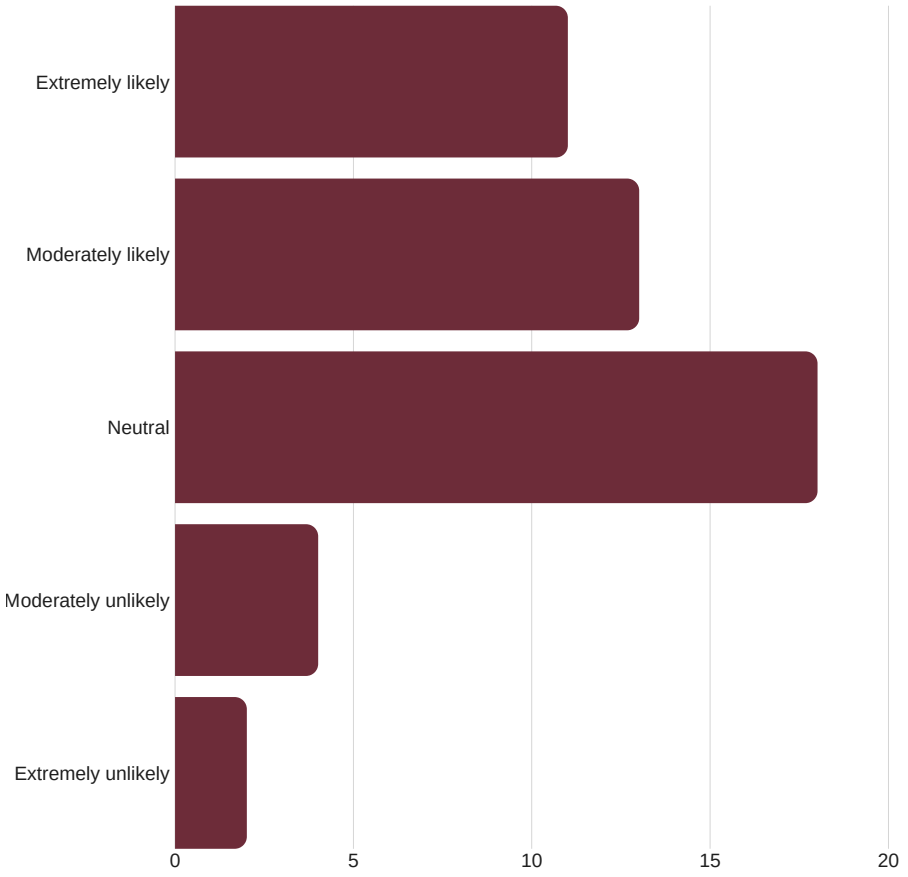

- Post #1: Students engaging in campus traditions.
- Post #2: Faculty and staff accomplishments
- Post #3: Motivational quotes and words of encouragement
- Post #4: Off-campus student activities and organizations (study abroad pictured above)

34.69% selected Post #4 and 30.61% selected Post #3. For Instagram, users are looking for content that is not as "professional" and want something more relatable to their age group and interests.

Sample Post

We created a poster (above) that Mays Business School could potentially post to their social media platforms. We asked our survey respondents to describe how likely they would be to like the post, share the post, or want to find out more information.

47.06%

of respondents said that they would be "extremely likely" or "moderately likely" to engage with this post.

What kinds of posts would you like to see?

"Posts should be by students, for students."

"Let students run the account for a day!"

"Student- created content."

"Accomplishments of Mays grads."

"Student life off- campus."

"I like seeing the quality of the students that are coming out of the University, and how they are interacting with society in their communities."

memorable

Users only spend a few minutes at a time scrolling through their feed, so Mays needs to jump outside the box and post content that is attention-grabbing and memorable.

What we learned

content

Users want to see more student-created content that they can relate to, especially on Instagram. Currently, Mays' posts are too centered around faculty and alumni.

audience

Mays should focus on differentiating their content between Facebook and Instagram in order to appeal to the right audience and increase user engagement. We found that an older demographic prefers Facebook and a younger demographic prefers Instagram, so Mays should consider this when planning their social media strategy.

Part 4: Key Takeaways

In Part 4, we will share three creative ideas as to how Mays Business School can improve their social media strategy to appeal to the correct audience. Not only will we describe these ideas, but we will explain how Mays should go about implementing them as well.

We have included three sample posts that reflect our ideas and new campaigns that could potentially be used by Mays.

Idea #1: Inclusivity & Differentiation of Content

#MAYS MEMORIES

Currently, Mays does not differentiate their posts between their Facebook and Instagram accounts. Everything that is posted to their Facebook account is posted to their Instagram account as well. As discussed earlier, in order to increase engagement from users, Mays needs to analyze their target audience for each platform and post content accordingly.

In our research, we found that a younger audience prefers Instagram while an older audience prefers Facebook. However, their Facebook content was found to be uninteresting and dull across the board because it lacks creativity and a call to action.

This sample post shown above was created to show how content posted to Facebook does not just have to be about alumni and academia. In order to engage some of their younger followers, and alumni too, Mays could use a creative campaign, like #MaysMemories, to be more inclusive of their very own students while still appealing to the older Facebook demographic.

Idea #2: Promote Student Organizations

From our survey, we learned that respondents really wanted to learn more about the various student organizations that Mays has to offer.

Especially for incoming students, finding the right organization to join can be a challenge, so this would be a great opportunity for Mays to advertise what they have to offer their students outside of class. This is the kind of content new and current students expect to see from Mays on Instagram, since this platform tends to be more aesthetically pleasing and lighthearted. This is why it is so important for Mays to differentiate their content between social media platforms. Alumni appreciation posts might be more acceptable for Facebook, but not for Instagram.

The sample post to the right is a simple, yet eye-catching graphic that any user would stop to look at when scrolling through their feed. Even though this post is advertising for a business organization, the mood is playful shows that Mays is not just strictly business.

Idea #3: Interpersonal

Respondents from our younger age group strongly expressed how Mays should focus on posting more relatable content to their Instagram. Mays students want to see content that they can connect with, which will make their Mays experience more memorable and exciting.

Mays can connect with their students on an interpersonal level by starting a #StudentTakeover campaign that allows students to take over the Mays Instagram account for a day. Students would be encouraged to interact with faculty, staff, recruiters, and student organizations in order to show how Mays is a welcoming environment that values its students. This could be especially exciting during career fair and Mays Fest (sample post pictured to the right).

The content that Mays currently posts to their Instagram is not appealing to their younger audience of students and lacks personality. The majority of survey respondents said that they wanted to see more student-generated content and posts regarding student life. Rather than focusing on the older generation of Aggies, Mays can bring students into the planning and execution of their Instagram strategy to make the content more relatable and engaging.

#STUDENT TAKEOVER

Implementation Plan

Objective: Promote academia

- Post 1-2 times a week
- Use Facebook as the platform for targeting older generations of Aggies through alumni and staff accomplishments
- Incorporate content that both past and present Mays students can relate to (#MaysMemories)
- Create posts with a call to action.

Objective: Focus on the students

- Post 3-4 times a week (use a content calendar to organize posts and times).
- Keep alumni, faculty, donor accomplishments to a minimum.
- Engage users by showcasing more student-generated content and life off-campus (#StudentTakeover).

We would begin implementing our recommendations by differentiating content to appeal to specific demographics on each platform. Since the vast majority of Instagram users are college-aged, content on this platform should be captivating, aesthetically-pleasing and inclusive of the student body. Students are constantly surrounded by academia, so a platform dedicated to showcase the fun and less serious side of Mays Business School would be a breath of fresh air.

The 18-24 year old demographic prefers interpersonal content that is both relatable and relevant. Emphasizing student life on Instagram could be as simple as letting club presidents do an "Instagram story takeover" during meetings/socials or a selfie contest involving students and Mays faculty. Both ideas effectively highlight students and promote smaller groups/events on campus in a memorable and unique way.

We would recommend leaving academia-related content such as alumni accomplishments and university department information for the slightly older demographic on Facebook. Here is where former students or potential benefactors can find updates or department contact information and all things showcasing the prestige of Mays Business School.

Appendix

Profile Interview Questions:

1.Ask about their lifestyle (are they a student, parent, have a job, health conscious, etc.)
2. Why did you sign up for F/I?
3. How often do you log on to F/I and how much time do you spend on the platform at a time?
4. How likely are they to engage with posts (liking, sharing, commenting) or do they just scroll through their feed?
5. Do they themselves post on F/I often?
6. What other academic departments do they follow on F/I?
7. What do they think of their home page/feed on F/I?
8. What kinds of posts do you find most interesting from this academic page?
9. How often do they post- would you like them to post more or less frequently?
10. What kinds of posts in general do they find most interesting (not just from academic pages)
11. What are your favorite pages/users to follow?
12. What do they think academic pages can do better to appeal to their audience and increase engagement?

Survey Questions:

This survey contributes to our MKTG 345 social media campaign project and all respondents will remain anonymous. This survey should take about 10 minutes to complete. Should you have any questions or concerns about this project, please email Professor Akshaya Sreenivasan at asreenivasan@mays.tamu.edu. Please provide your consent to continue taking this survey.

- Yes, I give my consent to take this survey.
- No, I do not give my consent.

What age group do you fall into?

- 16-35
- 40-60
- Other

How busy would you say your lifestyle is?

- Not busy at all
- Somewhat busy
- Varies from day to day
- Pretty busy
- Extremely busy

What is your occupation? (ex: student, parent, work full-time, etc.)

- Employed full-time
- Parent
- Student
- Employed part-time
- Other

Facebook or Instagram

Out of the two, which social media platform do you prefer?

- Facebook
- Instagram

Why did you create a Facebook account?

- To keep up with friends and family
- To keep up with celebrities
- To keep in touch with organizations and common groups
- To share my own content with other people for their business.

Other:

Why did you create an Instagram account?
- To keep up with friends and family
- To keep up with celebrities
- To keep in touch with organizations and common groups
- To share my own content with other people
- Other

How many times a day do you check the social media platform that you prefer, based off of your answer to the previous question?
(Enter a number)

How many minutes at a time do you use your preferred social media platform?
(Enter a number)

How often do you post to your preferred social media account?
- Once a month
- Once a week
- Once a day
- I hardly ever make a post
- I post more than once a day

How likely are you to engage with a post in the forms of likes, comments, shares, etc.?
- Extremely likely
- Somewhat likely
- Neither likely nor unlikely
- Somewhat unlikely
- Extremely unlikely

What kinds of posts do you like to see?
(You may select more than one)
- Current events and politics
- Posts from family and friends
- Cooking and recipes
- Arts, crafts, DIY projects
- Makeup and beauty
- Health and fitness
- Animals and wildlife

In this part of the survey, you will see a series of posts from Mays Business School's Facebook and Instagram pages. Please select the type of post that you find most interesting/ enjoyable to learn more about for each platform.

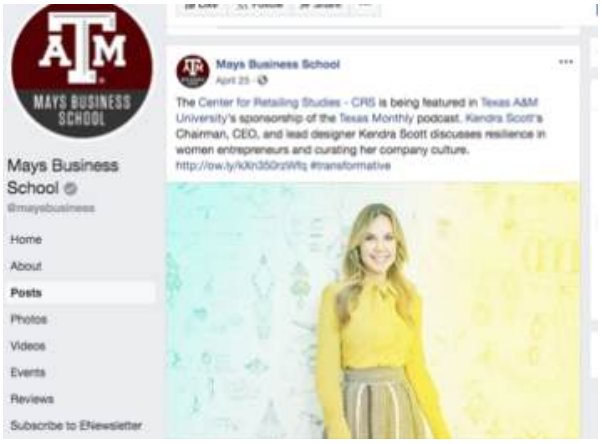

Facebook:

1. Posts about alumni and their accomplishments

2. Students interacting with faculty and staff.

3. Outside companies and organizations interacting with the Business School.

Of the three posts, which do you find most interesting and would enjoy learning more about?

- 1
- 2
- 3

Instagram :

1. Students and campus traditions

2. Faculty and staff accomplishments

3. Motivational quotes and words of encouragement

4. Student life off-campus and student organizations

Which of these Instagram posts did you find most interesting and would enjoy learning more about?

- 1
- 2
- 3
- 4

Below is a sample post created in order to advertise for the Mays Business School Marketing Study Abroad in Europe.

Based on this post, how likely would you be to like, share, comment, or select a link to find out more information?

- Extremely likely
- Moderately likely
- Slightly likely
- Neither likely nor unlikely
- Slightly unlikely
- Moderately unlikely
- Extremely unlikely

What kinds of posts do you think Mays Business School should focus on in order to increase engagement from their followers?
ex: content created by students, letting students run the account for a day, faculty and staff accomplishments, alumni appreciation, life off-campus, etc.

References

Ross School of Business [@michiganross]. (2019, July 8). Official Account of The Ross School of Business at the University of Michigan. Retrieved from https://www.instagram.com/michiganross/?hl=en.

Vice President for Communications. (2019). Facebook Best Practices. Michigan. The University of Michigan. Retrieved from https://socialmedia.umich.edu/wp-content/uploads/sites/30/2019/07/Facebook-Best-Practices-New.pdf.

Vice President for Communications. (2019). Instagram Best Practices. Michigan. The University of Michigan. Retrieved from https://socialmedia.umich.edu/wp-content/uploads/sites/30/2019/07/Instagram-Best-Practices-New.pdf

University Communications. (2019). Social Media Resources: Guidelines. Austin. The University of Texas at Austin. Retrieved from https://ucomm.utexas.edu/content/social-media-resources

University Communications. (2019). About: We Elevate the Brand and Protect Its Reputation. Austin. The University of Texas at Austin. Retrieved from https://ucomm.utexas.edu/about

The University of Texas at Austin [@UTAustinTX]. (2019, July 8). What Starts Here Changes the World. Retrieved from https://www.facebook.com/UTAustinTX/

The University of Texas at Austin [@UTAustin]. (2019, July 8). New Research from UT. Retrieved from https://twitter.com/UTAustin/status/1144708296840024071

Mccombs Business School [@utexasmccombs]. (2019, July 8). The Official Account of The Mccombs School of Business at The University of Texas at Austin. Retrieved from https://www.instagram.com/utexasmccombs/?hl=en

Mccombs Business School [@utexasmccombs]. (2019, July 8). #MondayMotivation. Retrieved from https://www.instagram.com/p/ByQt6r_HDTt/